

Travelport signs new agreement with Vipservice

15 December 2016

Travelport (NYSE: TVPT), a leading Travel Commerce Platform has today announced an extended agreement with leading travel agency and corporate travel services specialist Vipservice. Based in Moscow, Russia, Vipservice began operating in 1993 and in 2008 it launched Biletix, currently the third largest online travel agency in Russia.

As part of the agreement, Vipservice will continue to access a great variety of real time content from over 400 of the world's leading network airlines and low cost carriers, over 200 of whom also now merchandise and sell their full range of branded fares and ancillaries via Travelport's Travel Commerce Platform. Over 650,000 hotel properties and 36,000 car rental locations are also available through Travelport's Travel Commerce Platform. The new agreement will also see Vipservice deploying Travelport Universal API, the technology that provides travel agents with access to a world of content and functionality through a single API connection.

Dmitry Gorin, General Manager at Vipservice said: "We are delighted to be strengthening our relationship with Travelport. Through its Travel Commerce Platform and unique merchandizing capabilities, Travelport provides a great opportunity for our business to grow sales, provide better-quality customer service and give us a heightened online presence."

Maria Yakushkina, Regional Manager at Travelport Russia, commented: "The renewal of this agreement demonstrates the value that Vipservice has seen in Travelport's innovative technology and our extensive travel content. Today's travellers demand more choice and flexibility when they book travel and Travelport's solutions will continue to support Vipservice to manage these requirements as effectively and efficiently as possible and grow their business."
