

Travelport extends partnership deal with ZUJI

6 April 2017

Travelport (NYSE: TVPT), a leading Travel Commerce Platform announced today a new extended partnership with the leading Asia-focused online travel agency (OTA), ZUJI.

With this partnership, ZUJI, a well-known OTA brand in Southeast Asia, continues to connect to Travelport’s innovative Travel Commerce Platform providing its consumers with access to real-time travel content from over 400 airlines, both low cost carriers and network carriers, as well as 650,000 hotel properties and extensive car rental, rail and cruise options. Furthermore, over 200 airlines have signed up to use Travelport’s leading merchandising technology, which enables them to display and sell their branded fares and additional ancillary services in the same way they do on their own websites. This means that Zuji customers can easily shop and compare in one place in order to efficiently find the very best flight choice.

Jacob Jiang, Commercial Director of Uriel Aviation Holdings Ltd, the holding company of ZUJI, said: “We are pleased to deepen ZUJI’s partnership with Travelport to deliver valuable choices to our customers and enhance our ability to provide an exceptional e-commerce experience. With Travelport’s impressive content, technology and solutions, we look forward to exploring further growth opportunities in the online travel space.”

Mark Meehan, Travelport’s Managing Director, Asia Pacific, “As online booking is very often the preferred method for travel purchases in Southeast Asia, Travelport is excited to be able to provide distribution and content support for our partners. We are also investing in the online and travel technology space in this region which continues to be the fastest growing in the world. We are thrilled that ZUJI recognizes the value of what we have built together and are keen to continue working with us into the future.”

ZUJI continues to be one of over 68,000 travel agencies around the globe connecting to Travelport’s travel commerce platform.
